

A Race in the Forest

Last Sunday, Marco and his friends, Timmy and Jason, went to a big forest. They wanted to see the view there.

When they almost arrived at the forest, Marco said, 'Let's have a race. If I win, you must listen to me. If you win, I will listen to you.'

Then Marco ran to the bridge. While Marco was running, he suddenly fell and his shoe came off. It fell into the river. Marco was upset. His friends wanted to help him, but the river was too deep. He saw an old man fishing by the river. He asked him for help. The fisherman was kind. He helped them.

The fisherman used his fishing rod to fish out the shoe, but he got a boot instead. He asked Marco, 'Is this yours?'

Marco replied, 'No, that isn't mine.'

Then, the old man tried to catch another shoe. He caught a green and yellow shoe. The old man asked, 'Is this yours?'

'Yes, that's mine. Thanks a lot!' Marco answered happily.

After Marco put on his shoe, he and his friends continued their race. Marco murmured, 'Next time I will be more careful when I am walking or running.'
